FISH KNOCKS OUT JAMES T. HARAHAN

Fist Fight Enlivens Railroad Directors' Meeting.

BLOW AS LIE IS PASSED

Attempt to Adjourn Conference Prematurely Causes Trouble.

Former President of Illinois Central Denounces Certain Members as "Harriman Tools," and Violent Resentment Leads to Blow-Harahan Falls at First Swing, and It Is All Over-Were Once Fast Eriends,

New York, Aug. 28.-The regular monthly meeting of the Illinois Central directors broke up in a fist fight to-day. The fight was like the "Terrible Battle" of the old story. There were two blows struck. Stuyvesant Fish hit President James T. Harahan and Mr. Harahan hit

The impact of Mr. Fish's blow was not softened by the fact that for twenty years Mr. Harahan and he were close business associates. That was the period when Mr. Fish was president of the Illinois Central and Mr. Harahan a sub- yacht. ordinate, who got his position and successive promotions through Mr. Fish's Muldoon, however. Though his health is and, it has been alleged, against the wishes of E. H. Harriman.

The old friendship ceased when, last November, Mr. Harahan lined up with Mr. Harriman in the campaign to oust Mr. Fish, and was chosen president as the latter's successor.

The blow was a long right swing and undoubtedly had feeling as well as all the FOUR KILLED IN AUTO strength of a powerful man behind it.

Mr. Harahan was presiding over the meeting to-day. Nine of the directors chairs around the big mahogany table in the board room. Only routine business had been under discussion, and there had not been a sign of the rancor which has year. Mr. Harriman was in the West, and there began to be a feeling that one meeting was to end without acri-

Fish Disturbs Serenity.

Mr. Fish, who had interposed not the slightest objection to any of the proceedings, and had been agreeable as possible disturbed this serenity by rising and pro ceeding to read a resolution. The other directors began to sit up and take notice. The exact text of the resolution could red to-day. Mr. Fish would not give it out, or, for that matter, would he make any comment on any of the proceedings of the meeting, while most of the others present were equally

"Gentlemen, you can't adjourn in the middle of a matter of business," he said. "This is astonishing and surcourtesy to interpose a motion to admy resolution."

"The meeting has been declared adjourned, and stands adjourned," retorted Mr. Harahan curtly, facing Mr. Fish across the table.

"The meeting is not adjourned." Mr. Fish came back with increasing warmth, "and I declare you cannot adjourn it unless you demonstrate what I have said, that you are Harriman tools and puppets, and that the-

"I'm not a Harriman tool," Mr. Harahan broke in threateningly, "nor the tool of any man. Any one who says so lies."

Mr. Fish is a big man. He weighs upward of 210, stand- over six feet, and is of brawny build. But he has always kept himself in perfect condition, as hard as he is heavy, and quick to a degree that belies his bulk. His weight accordingly did not impede his movements as he what he described as a partial statement jumped across the table and swung at of his side of the controversy. Mr. Harahan, all in one movement.

Harahan Down and Out.

Mr. Harahan assumed a posture of defense and looked like no mean antagonist. Though not as heavy as Mr. Fish having but a bit the best of it in weight and reach, though of undoubted superiority in science.

The first and only blow was a long right hand swing with all the weight of Mr. Fish's 210 pounds behind it, and all the added strength-which a feeling of insult and animosity impart. It broke through Mr. Harahan's guard as if his hands were tissue and landed with but Stuart at 224-230 D street southeast, late little diminished impact, squarely on the last night.
